Forget return-to-office. Imagine Deliver built the anti-office.

It is a space engineered for cross sector leadership and real, productive collaboration.

THE DETAILS

2,000 sq. ft. on the Mississippi riverfront

16-seat community table as an anchor for systems-level conversation

Meditation room for solo reset and restoration

Movement paths and layered acoustic zones

Modular spaces designed for creative collision

Biophilic finishes and circadian rhythm-supporting lighting

Imagine Deliver's headquarters is a live prototype for the future of leadership and work.

More than just an office, it was intentionally built to reflect the evolving realities of a distributed, interdependent, and human-centered workforce.

The space supports collaboration across differences, nurtures imagination, and unlocks strategic clarity.

WHAT GUIDED OUR SPACE DESIGN

Considerate Design™ Method: Our proprietary approach that begins with the people most affected, integrating human-centered design, and participatory research with neuroscience, organizational psychology, and environmental design.

Workforce and Sector Insights: Drawn from years of partnering with leaders in community development, commercial real estate, and workforce transformation to understand how environments shape strategy, trust, and collaboration.

Sustainability and Sensory Science: Nature-infused, allostatic spaces designed using sustainable materials, biomimicry, and environmental psychology to support clarity, adaptability, and cross-sector problem-solving.

PRIMARY USE CASES

Strategy sprints and coalition-building workshops

Leadership offsites and board sessions

Service design and systems mapping convenings

Morning labs and multi-day retreats

“This is not a space for productivity tracking.

It’s a space where clarity, belonging, and creativity are spatially supported.

People who gather here think better – together.”
